

COLUMNAR ARCHITECTURE

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An integrated circuit (IC) is disclosed having circuitry arranged in a plurality of columns. A column in the IC is essentially a series of aligned circuit elements of the same type that extends from a first edge of the IC to a second edge. In addition there may be a center column having circuit elements of different types.